On July 8, Israeli warplanes attacked a delegation of the Palestinian Authority (PA) led by its prime minister, Rami Hamdallah, and left seven Palestinians dead. In response, the Fatah Central Committee (FCC) said that the PA "no longer exists as a government on the ground". "The Palestinian people will not allow a corrupt government to continue to pursue the policy of negligence," it said. The Israeli assault and the Palestinian response is likely to increase pressure to isolate Israel politically, economically, and more importantly, militarily. It is not yet clear what form Israel's attack took. However, it is clear that Israeli expansionist policy in the occupied territories is growing. The Israeli authorities are now firmly committed to what is known as the two-state solution, whereby the Palestinian state and Israel are set up side by side. The idea of a unitary state with the Palestinians as equals and equals to Israel is far from reality. The speech of Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas on August 4 at the Arab League summit was a new step towards this direction, where he declared support for a two-state solution while calling for a resolution of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict through peace negotiations. This process will take time and may be one of negotiations within a much bigger process of political, economic, and social change in the region. Meanwhile, this encourages Israel to go on expanding its settlements, moving into more land, and keep the West Bank under its occupation. It will also encourage Gaza and the West Bank to move closer together economically and politically, putting a strain on their independence

Kawasaki BK117 For Xplanetorrent Hit

. Kawasaki BK117 For Xplanetorrent Hit. . Category:KawasakiThe present invention relates to a connecting ring for fastening a ball-and-socket joint. Connecting ring of this type are often used in the ball-and-socket joints of aircraft landing gear components, especially in the function coupling of the upper fuselage element with the lower landing gear unit. The joining of such components between landing gear units and between landing gear units and the fuselage is performed by means of ball-and-socket joints in order to achieve a loose connection which allows small clearance movements. In this case, the ball-and-socket joint comprises a ball-shaped end fitting which is provided with a radially projecting retaining ring, around the end fitting the ball-and-socket joint is arranged in a socket-shaped component which is provided with a radially projecting key for accommodating the end fitting. Such an arrangement is often used to form a tension-locking safety mechanism of the ball-and-socket joint. The ball is loaded in the direction of the load by means of a fork spring which is supported by the ball and of which two opposite legs are arranged between the ball and the end fitting and with its opposite leg is arranged between the ball and the ball-and-socket joint in the socket-shaped component. However, the ball-and-socket joint of this type has a considerable torsional rigidity of the ball-and-socket joint, as a result of which the fork spring is capable of raising the ball in a rotational direction about the end fitting only up to a small degree. Furthermore, the ball is elastically supported in such a manner that a deflection in the direction of the load is scarcely possible, as a result of which the ball is loaded only to a limited extent, and consequently the ball must be positively stressed. A further disadvantage consists in that the ball and the end fitting are provided with a high wearing-out and a relatively high loading, as a result of which this ball-and-socket joint should be replaced relatively frequently. A connecting ring of this type is, for example, known from EP 0 619 867 B1. It is the object of the present invention to provide a connecting ring for a ball-and-socket joint in which the ball is loadable in direction of the load or is pushed in the direction of the load with a minimum of force and wear, while simultaneously a high rig 3e33713323
