After creating a contact it's as simple as pressing the windows key, typing a few letters of the name you assigned to a contact, select the users name from the start menu search results and yahoo messenger will open a conversation with the user. I want to open up a new conversation with a contact. A: From BuddyCuts is a simple program that helps you create a file that Yahoo Messenger recognizes. When this file opens it tells Yahoo Messenger to begin a conversation or "IM/PM" with a user. which would make it a replacement for Pidgin/Gajim. It's not very well-known (it was updated 2 years ago) but it might be a little bit easier to use. Q: Virtualbox graphics performance I'd like to use virtualbox to get a development environment on a windows host (my host has no graphic card and I don't want to buy one). I'd like to know if anyone tried doing it and has any feedback. The only requirements are a fairly old video card, either integrated or discrete, with 2 to 4 GB of video ram. The host also has to be able to perform booting from USB for some applications (I already have a solution for that). The application would be a very simple one, just a traditional Windows Form + some controls + animations. I was thinking in buying the latest version of virtualbox (5.0.0), the guest os should be Vista and the host should be Windows 7. A: I have used VB 4 and VB 5.0.0 in combination with guest OS's like Ubuntu, Windows XP and XP virtual machines. I can only recommend VB 4 as it is the one that runs fastest, and more importantly I believe it is the easiest one to use. However, using VB 5.0.0 is just as easy, but it feels a bit sluggish. I believe that is because it requires the CPU to be more active, which on a host with a slow CPU such as Intel b7e8fdf5c8
