The new site comes with a "live" version but for the sake of testing its supposed to be the same codebase as the "final". My problem is how can I test my site? In my local environment everything works fine but when I try to access it through a different domain it just simply doesn't work. A good example of what's happening is that as soon as my document loads jQuery just stops working, even when I remove it it won't execute the code (Tested this in the chrome debugger). I can also access the live version of the site in a similar way: Any response, even if it's just a simple piece of text on the page, isn't executed. Is it possible for me to write this page to a separate file on my local server then load this file into my main document? I know its possible to do as I have seen it done before but I don't know how? The
